Product Description:

Once upon a time, there was a greedy king who loved nothing more than gold. He had so much gold that he could fill a whole castle with it. But no matter how much gold he had, he always wanted more. One day, a wise old man came to the king and said, "Your Majesty, you are the richest king in the land, but you are also the most greedy. You have so much gold that you could never spend it all in your lifetime. Why don't you share your wealth with your people?"

The king was angry. "Why should I share my gold with my people?" he asked. "It's mine!"

The wise old man sighed. "Because it is not right to keep all your wealth to yourself," he said. "Your people are starving and poor, while you live in luxury. It is not fair."

The king did not listen to the wise old man. He continued to hoard his gold, and his people continued to suffer.

One day, a terrible drought came to the land. The crops failed, and the people had no food. They came to the king and begged him for help, but he refused. He said that he had no food to spare.

The people were desperate. They had no food, and they were dying. Finally, they decided to take matters into their own hands. They stormed the king's castle and took all of his gold. They then divided the gold among themselves, and they were finally able to buy food and survive.

The king was left with nothing. He had lost all of his gold, and he had lost the respect of his people. He was a greedy king, and he had learned his lesson the hard way.
